

Canada's Part.

Editorial from the New York Times

In his conversations with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park the Canadian Prime Minister could very appropriately, and doubtless did, lay before the President impressive details of his country's all-out war effort. It has been no mean accomplishment. In fact, looked at against the background of the Dominion's limited population, peaceful preoccupation with anything but armament and previous scant development of vast natural resources, the achievement is one of the little appreciated miracles of this war. There is good reason for the statement that the American people do not realize the full extent of Canadian sacrifices.

Out of every dollar earned by a Canadian at the present time 60 cents goes to the Government. Of that 60 cents 43 cents are expended in the war effort, 25 cents going directly to Canada's own war expenses and the remaining 18 cents to pay for the supplies furnished to Great Britain by her loyal sister Dominion. The 17 cents left are used in necessary government expenses. Aside from her meagre exports to Canada, Britain is unable to repay a cent of the Dominion's heavy contribution in materials. It is a debt that may never be repaid. As to that Canada raises no issue. She fills unquestionably all requests made of her. She even asks, from time to time, what more she can do.

Canada has cut her expenses of government. She has reduced non-essential civilian production. Bacon is rationed, cheese rationed for British consumption, aluminum for civilian use has been reduced to 2 per cent of normal. Every metal except lead is in fact now rationed, as Canadian war industries roll into full production.

The war industries and armed forces have almost dried up the available sources of Canadian manpower, yet those now employed will meet only about 60 per cent of the need that is fast approaching. The next industrial reinforcements must come mainly from the older men, from women and from youngsters under military age or physically unfit for military service. The production program envisages the employment of most of the single women and one in ten of the married women.

And Mr. Mackenzie King could, if he wished, point to one outstanding demonstration of Canadian patriotism. In the last month not

Hospital Plan Outlined at Meeting

The plan for the organization of the proposed hospital and hospitalization scheme of the Western View Health Society was presented at a meeting held in the Didsbury Opera House on Thursday last.

Stan Edwards of Olds, who is the organizer for the health society, outlined the plan and stressed the need of such a hospital in this district, and said that if we are to secure the benefit of such an institution, it must be by the co operation and support of all the people in the district. He stated that a canvass would be made and asked that everyone become members of the Society and subscribe as generously as they can.

Mr. W. A. Shultz, supervisor of Municipal Hospitals in Alberta, spoke in support of the plan and stated that need for more hospital accommodation was becoming urgent as the people throughout the province began to realize more and more the benefits of hospitalization. He also remarked that the Provincial Department of Health fully approved of the plan.

George Clarke, reeve of the Westerdale Municipal district, and W. H. Davies, chairman of the School Division, also spoke in favor of the scheme.

Mr. A. E. Ford acted as chairman of the meeting.

Obituary.

Clarence Stuart, aged 64 passed away at Cranbrook, B.C., on Wed. Nov. 13th, following an operation.

Mr. Stuart was an old timer of this district, coming here from Iowa in 1902. He homesteaded in the Stuart School District, north east of Didsbury and farmed there until 1926. For many years he was a member of the school board of that district and for several years secretary.

He is survived by his wife, three daughters and six sons. Also seven grandchildren.

The funeral was held at Cranbrook, on Friday, his six sons acting as pallbearers.

Landmark Disappears

Another Didsbury landmark will disappear shortly. Jim Caithness is tearing down the old South Livery barn to make way for more modern structures.

The old livery barn, which is the last in Didsbury, was a relic of a former age. It was built in the early 1900's and for many years it served a useful purpose, with horses and even oxen being stabled there for the night after having travelled as far as away east of Three Hills and Trochu, and from the limit of the settlement west.

With the advent of truck and car, however, the livery stable business started to decay and during the latter years there has been little call for the stabling of horses in town.

We understand Mr. Caithness intends erecting a garage and storage on the front part of the lot with a small stable at the rear.

Bring Home Limit Chinese Pheasants.

While at Brooks they called on their old friend, J. A. McGhee.

To Stop Issuing Permit Books

Elevator agents may not issue 1941-42 permit books after December 15th, 1941, the Canadian Wheat Board states in a circular. On that date agents must forward unused permit books to the head office of their organizations

Elevator agents are requested to have all producers, entitled to permits, take out their books prior to December 15. All applications for permits after December 15th must be made to the Quota Department, Canadian Wheat board, Winnipeg.

National Farm Radio Forum

Each Monday evening from 8:30 to 9:00 the National Farm Radio Forum is being presented over a Dominion-wide radio hookup. It is suggested that farm families should make a practice of listening in to these programs, and listening groups are being formed throughout Alberta and the Dominion of Canada to arouse interest.

Alberta's industrial expansion continues apace, and in a large number of fields the gains were marked during the first seven months of 1941. The latest report of the department of trade and industry shows that lumber production has gained 121 per cent, oil 35 per cent, clay products, lime 17 per cent, natural gas 6 per cent, cement 127 per cent; also gains of coarse grains 51 per cent, butter 61 per cent, cheese 29 per cent, cattle exports 24 per cent, packing plant sales 50 per cent, flour milling 39 per cent, concentrated milk 40 per cent

Dies as Result of a Runaway

Walter Umbach, aged 49 years, died on Sunday in a Calgary hospital as the result of an accident which took place on his farm five miles west of Carstairs on Wednesday.

Mr. Umbach was unhitching a team and when all but one tug was unhitched the team bolted, knocking him down and the wagon passed over his body

Dr. Clarke was called and found his chest was crushed and a number of ribs badly broken. The patient was taken to Calgary where he passed away Sunday.

Surviving are his wife, 2 sons, 2 daughters. Mr. Umbach is a native of this district, his parents being among the earliest settlers.

The funeral service will be held this Thursday afternoon at 2.30 at the Waterloo Church, and the interment will take place at the Waterloo Cemetery. Durrer's Funeral Home has charge of the arrangements.

Hunters Return

Jack Topley and Frank Hesselton returned Saturday from a hunting trip on the Red Deer. The other members of the party, Jack McCloy, Bert Fisher and Otto Muller returned the previous week.

Three moose, three deer and two sheep were brought in by the hunters. They claim there is lots of game in that district but that lack of snow made tracking difficult.

What Of The Future

The successful prosecution of the war should be the thought uppermost in our minds as long as the present struggle for freedom and democracy continues. The winning of the war should engage the attention of every loyal citizen of Canada to the exclusion of less important matters. But there is a question that is receiving considerable attention these days and it is not entirely unrelated to our war aims. It is the important matter of what we propose to do in the way of taking care of the men of our armed forces at the period of demobilization. A country worth fighting for is a country that will provide after the war a decent standard of living, not only for the veterans, but also for the army of workers who are presently engaged in munition plants and other war efforts.

New Social Order

Both in Britain and in Canada many public speakers as well as government leaders have frequently referred to post-war plans. They go so far as to predict that the old order will pass away, and a new social era will take its place, where there will be more equality of opportunity, and where poverty and degradation will be relegated to the limbo.

There are very fine sentiments and ideals and savor of Utopian dreams that one has heard in the past. What is needed to engender more faith are concrete methods to be followed to attain this desired end. If after a period of ten years, when unemployment was rampant in Canada, the impact of war will bring about a new attitude and a new psychology, then out of the present struggle may dawn a brighter day.

Here in the west a goodly portion of the men who have volunteered for overseas duty have been drawn from the farms. If measures could be taken to rehabilitate the agricultural industry, it would not only provide work for these men when they return to their homes, but it would also put new life into the whole economy of the West. It may well be that at the conclusion of hostilities there will be a demand for our wheat to feed the starving millions in Europe. There should then be little difficulty in getting rid of our wheat surplus. This in itself would tend to bring about better price for our main products, and improve the outlook for farming generally. A prosperous West has always improved business conditions throughout the Dominion, in providing a better market for the manufactured products in the east.

Provide More Work

The building up of huge armament industries in the east has demonstrated what Canada can do in a state of emergency. A lesson can be drawn from this, and there is little doubt but that the industrialization of the east will receive a new impetus and will continue to expand. In the past we have had to depend on other countries for many essentials that could be produced as economically in Canada. Now that we have found that we can really accomplish the impossible, it may well mean that new industries will be established to furnish more employment in the years to come.

Certain it is that in a comparatively new country like Canada, if we have the proper leadership, a way should be found to provide work for all those who desire to work. Canada is frequently referred to as a country of almost unlimited natural resources, and its potential wealth can scarcely be computed. A way should easily be found to develop these resources for the benefit of those who may be in need and for the general prosperity of Canada. It is to be sincerely hoped that all the encouraging talk one hears from time to time will have some foundation in fact, and that the world we knew before the commencement of war will be a thing of the past, and a new social order will be ushered in. It should not be impossible of attainment if the necessary directive force is applied to the task.

Because the situation required not only a steady hand but also a great deal of tact, whenever a new applicant was considered for such service, the question of the candidate's fitness always arose. When an applicant was rejected, it was because he was thought "not fit to hold a candle to him" (the prospective employer).

Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., said in an interview at Winnipeg that the people in eastern Canada to-day have a good understanding of the economic difficulties of agriculture and realize this is a problem that must be met by an entire people.

He said the common purpose of the war effort is uniting the Canadian people as never before and that he believed there is a more enlightened appreciation than formerly in the east of special problems relating to agriculture, not only of agriculture on the prairies, but in all parts of the Dominion.

"So I do," stammered the other, "but on a smaller scale, you know." "What's your usual job?" "Watch repairing!"

Czechs In Canada Are Eager To Meet German Hordes

Colonel Cenek Hutnik and Wing-Commander Jan Ambrus, from the Czechoslovak Military Mission of the Czechoslovak Army fighting with the British Forces, have returned from Batawa, Ont., the new development of the Bata Shoe Company of Canada, where they made an appeal to the Czechoslovak subjects to volunteer for the Czechoslovak Army in England.

This challenge to the patriotism of the men who saw Hitler's hordes marching through Czechoslovakia in spring 1939, found a response not exceeded amongst the Czechoslovak population of the North American continent. All men having the necessary qualifications volunteered. Some of them have an excellent military training from their own country as fighting pilots or tank drivers, and will be a valuable asset to the Czechoslovak Forces fighting with the British.

A great many of them are already engaged in the production of war munitions, and their offer to enlist may be accepted only after careful consideration of their usefulness by the Canadian Government; but others will be able to throw their weight into the job of fighting Hitler directly with arms.—From the Czechoslovak Consulate.

R.A.F. Pilot Arrived At New York After Bombing Berlin

In recent weeks a man happened to go into a New York night club and in the course of the evening some men came in. The New Yorker magazine has a contributor who recognized one of the men as an Englishman, and joined the party. The others were also English, and one of them remarked to the American: "Guess what we were doing last night?" The American tried to guess without success. "Bombing Berlin" was the laconic reply.

It was true. Returning to London from a Berlin raid, these fliers were told they were going to New York, and thus hustled on a plane for Newfoundland. Arriving at Newfoundland some hours later, they boarded a plane which took them to New York, and having arrived in the evening they were in a New York night club 24 hours after bombing Berlin.

Gallant Ferry Pilots Risk Their Lives In Outstanding Service

When the memorials are erected after this war, says the Windsor Star, one class of gallant men should not be forgotten. They are the ferry pilots who are spending their time flying bombing planes from this continent to Britain.

Of necessity, much of the work of these men is done in secret. Even their names are not generally known, but they are courageously risking their lives day after day in outstanding service to the Empire. They are meeting death, some of them, though to the credit of their skill it is to be noted that not one as yet has been lost at sea. Most of the fatalities have occurred in take-offs and landings. Those who have died and will die are as truly heroes of this war as are the combat pilots who fall to enemy action, and they deserve their tribute of honor from a grateful people.

Idea Is All Wrong

Coloring Of Leaves In Fall Not Due To Frost

Annually, when the reds and yellows begin to appear in the woodlands, the comment is heard: "Yes, it's beautiful—but just wait until after the first frost!" The old folk-tale concerning the part frost plays in the color changes of the leaves dies hard.

Those who have studied those changes assert that frost plays no part in the process. It is a matter of chemistry not yet fully understood. Throughout the spring the leaves are colored green by the presence of chlorophyll, a strange plant substance which converts carbon dioxide and water into food for the tree. When the season begins to wane, the chlorophyll slowly changes to another form, known as plastids. The plastids have a chemical coloring known as carotinoids, which react to sunlight and cooler temperatures. Some of them turn bright yellow, others turn red.

Another color factor lies in the amount of plant sugar trapped in the leaves when the branches cut off the sap veins in preparation for winter. This plant sugar reacts to chill nights and changes color, sometimes to red or purple.

Thus the brilliance of autumn is not brought about by the first frost but from the chemistry of the leaves themselves.

Resources Of Our Empire Clearly Shows We Have Essentials For Winning War

(The Financial Post)

We can win this war because we've got what it takes to win—man power, strategic materials and machinery to convert them.

Germany and her aides had a tremendous start in men, equipment and in the conversion of their economies to a war basis. But we are gaining at an ever accelerating rate.

This is the inescapable conclusion from an exhaustive study made by The Financial Post of available data on both material resources and their utilization.

Here are some facts:

1. $32 billions of war equipment is to come from the British Empire and the United States this year. Next year's figure will tower high above that. Germany's own total war expenditure was $23 billions. No one knows what she can get out of "occupied" Europe and Italy.

2. Germany operates in an "economy of scarcity," being short of such essentials as gasoline, lubricants, many metals, textiles, fats, but she is apparently not yet in an "economy of starvation."

3. Germany has worked wonders with her policy of substitution and use of synthetic products. But it is a costly, wasteful method. Synthetic gasoline costs three times as much as the natural product. Aluminum, where substituted for copper, needs twice as much electric power to make. "Buna," Germany's rubber substitute, needs 30,000 kw.m. per ton to make; natural rubber none.

The Democracies are making enormous speed in turning their aluminum, copper, nickel, steel into ships, tanks and airplanes.

Here are some further facts:

1. The British nation and the United States are now approaching the combined airplane output of Germany, Italy and Europe. A year from now the U.S. schedule alone calls for 4,000 planes a month, approximately equal to the largest estimates of Axis present output.

2. Air crew training plans of the Empire and the U.S. for current year will turn out at least four times as many trained pilots, navigators, gunners, etc., as Germany can expect.

3. U.S. ship deliveries are just getting under way. In 1942 projected deliveries will be about six million deadweight tons. At least two million tons—probably much more—will be added to this from Empire sources.

4. Germany and Italy still lead in number of submarines and warplanes in commission.

5. In all other naval vessels the Democracies lead. Britain alone had 100 more fighting ships commissioned at January 1 this year, excluding submarines, than Germany and Italy combined. And the Empire and the U.S.A. are building new navies at a prodigious rate.

The Democracies control the major materials of war. Dr. Goebbels, chief Nazi propagandist, speaks of six vital raw materials—coal, iron, cotton, copper, oil and rubber.

The British Empire, the United States and Russia are dominant in all of them in the ratio of eight to one. More than this, Britain and her allies have access to additional supplies from unoccupied countries.

Germany is short of four of the items. She has nearly adequate supplies only of coal and iron, thanks to her conquests.

The survey by The Financial Post reveals that the British Empire alone has an industrial capacity greater than that of Germany and all occupied Europe. The combined industrial capacity of the Commonwealth, United States and Russia is three and a half times as great as that of Hitler's Europe.

Germany faces a 15 million barrel shortage of oil this year.

She has iron and steel but lacks the metals required to turn them into vital war alloys.

Germany is virtually without access to supplies of nickel, tin and crude rubber. Her own scientists bemoan the disadvantage of the high cost of producing synthetic rubber.

Germany has coal but much of it is of poor fuel value. Having no cotton and little wool she uses staple fibres made of wood.

Thus we have the materials, the factory capacity, the men and the skill in abundance.

But to win we must use them quickly and efficiently.

Possession of unlimited stores of raw materials from which raw materials might be made does not turn these materials into airplanes, tanks, trucks, guns or explosives.

Having millions of able bodied men of military age among the population does not mean a trained army, air force or navy.

It is ability and speed in turning these raw materials, these able-bodied men, into tanks, ships, guns, airplanes, trained soldiers, pilots and seamen, that win wars.

The Post survey shows that we are beginning to use these superior resources to overtake Hitler's giant, long accumulating strength.

Have No Illusions

People Of Norway Know Who Is Their Worst Enemy

This is the text of an appeal being circulated underground by Norwegian patriots. It answers in the following terms both the Quisling and Nazi attempts to line up Norway as an ally of Germany against Russia.

"Terboven has declared that there is a widespread desire among us Norwegians to fight the Russians side by side with the Germans.

"We Norwegians have nothing to do with Russia. It is the Germans—not the Russians who have stolen our country from us. We have therefore not the slightest sympathy for Hitler and his German executioners.

"Terboven's cheerful assumption is thus nothing else than a pretext to help Germany mobilize able-bodied Norwegians for the fight which has already cost many German lives, and which has become such a gruesome mass-slaughter that the Germans are not able to bear it alone.

"But not a single one of us will fall for this pretext. We shall all refuse for our own sakes and for Norway's sake. We shall not offer our blood in order that a tyrant remain in power.

"God save our King and our native land."

Method Has Been Improved

Which Makes It Simpler To Send Pictures By Wire

A new and improved portable transmitter for sending photographs by wire has been announced by the Associated Press.

Only about half as large and heavy as the previous wirephoto portable, the new machine sends a picture nine by seven inches, instead of four by five, the old dimensions. The added size and detail mean that the pictures needed less retouching.

When a photograph is to be sent, the suitcase in which the transmitter is housed, is attached by a coil to any available telephone box. Then it is plugged in, like a radio, to a convenient electric light outlet. This latter connection operates tubes and electrical equipment.

After the tubes are warmed up, the photo to be sent, automatically wrapped upon a revolving cylinder in the suitcase, is ready. A phone call is put through to the person or office wanting the picture. Over this call the picture travels, in electrical impulses, to the receiving number, where a similar apparatus puts it back on photographic film.

Power Passing To Generals

Hitler Still In Charge But Beginning To Suffer Eclipse

John Gordon in the London Sunday Express says:

Have you noticed a curious development in Germany recently? Apart from Hitler and Ribbentrop, you never see a Nazi leader in the picture nowadays. Only the generals, Hitler, and his Foreign Office thug.

What is happening? I make a guess. Hitler is beginning to suffer the eclipse that comes to all dictators in war. As soon as the armies begin to move, power passes from the dictator to the generals.

Hitler is still powerful, very powerful, but his power is passing to his generals. And if his armies meet with serious reverses in Russia, it will pass completely to the generals.

He may still sweep a general now and again, but when things go wrong he will be left to hold the baby. And that moment may be imminent.

We need to watch for it, to beware of it. For generals of all nations—ours included—are like Freemasons. They tend to hang together. Their minds move in the same track. They speak the same language, and they can usually comfortably make a deal with each other.

The German generals may not all be Nazis, but in this war their hands are just as bloodstained as Hitler's. The Fuehrer gave them the opportunity to make what they so nicely named a total war. They took full advantage of it.

And when the time comes to pay the price, we must see that they pay it as well as Hitler's gang. Let's have no more of this honorable soldier nonsense.

Both Hitler and his generals are fighting for their lives. They know it, and very soon all deluded Germany will know it. But trapped beasts often take a lot of killing, and this crew will be as tough as most.

We seem to be on the eve of new diversions.

Japan, the Hun nation of the Far East, is being pushed in to cause a rampus. Spain is being agitated into action. The thumb screws are being put on Turkey.

All these subsidiary volcanoes are being forced into eruption for one purpose, and one purpose only—to divert our strength from Europe to the faraway places, to ease the pressure on Germany and to prevent us landing the vital blow.

Easy Way Out

Bigger, the business man, was signing his letters.

"I see," he said to his typist, "that you have spelled received with 'ie' and 'ei' in another."

"I'm sorry," she said, "one of them was a slip."

"Well, you'd better correct it before you post the letter."

"Certainly. By the way, which one will I correct?"

"Why er-why, the one that's wrong, of course."

A Real Compliment

School In Republic Of Panama Named "Dominion Of Canada"

"Believe it or not" there is a school in the Republic of Panama called the "Dominion of Canada." Naming this school is in accordance with a decree issued by the Panamanian government to the effect that each of the public schools of the republic will be named after one of the American or European countries.

The school, "Dominio del Canada," is situated in Santiago, which is one of the largest towns in the Republic of Panama. Santiago is in the interior about 180 miles from Panama City, and is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, settlement on the isthmus. Most of the old Spanish families in Santiago originally came from Santiago, Spain. Columbus was Duke of Veraguas, Veraguas being the province of which Santiago is the capital.

On the occasion of the naming of this school in 1939, a fiesta was declared and elaborate preparations were made to celebrate the event. On this occasion the department of trade and commerce supplied a number of photographs suitably framed and titled, and also a map of Canada.

Mr. H. W. Brighton, Canadian trade commissioner at Panama City, has been informed by His Majesty's minister in Panama, that the school proposes to celebrate Canada's national day, July 1, next year. Dept. of Trade and Commerce.

People Watch The Bombers

Elated When They Return With No Gaps In Ranks

At vantage points round London people now gather regularly to watch the departure of our bombers en route for Western Germany and Occupied France, says the London correspondent of the Ottawa Journal.

They seem to know exactly at what time to see them set out and when they may be expected to return, though on the outward journey they sometimes fly at such a great height that it is difficult to pick them up with the naked eye. The main concentration on their homeward journey is to count their number.

There is always great elation when they come back in perfect formation, and corresponding depression when there are gaps in the ranks. Sometimes depression turns into joy and relief when two or three laggards are seen bringing up the rear. One of the prettiest sights is to see one of our reconnaissance planes turn aside to greet the bombers. They go streaking up to the formation, dip and return—leaving the onlooker wondering what cheery message has been exchanged.

(John T. Whitaker, in Chicago Daily News)

The people of Britain to-day know nothing of the soul-searching, indecision and doubt that affects Americans. To them the problems have become simple starkly simple. England expects that every man will do his duty. It's that simple.

The people with whom I talked have made their peace with death and have forgotten any financial worries for the future. Every one must behave well. Every one does. My own personal friends, without exception, looked in better health and happier than when I had seen them before the war. People have found a new courage and a new dignity. Nothing can crush that kind of morale.

That morale has convinced the Germans that an invasion of Britain is too risky. Add to its two facts: American planes, tanks, arms and foodstuffs are reaching Britain in quantities at last. American warships are now escorting these supplies as far as Iceland, and the sinkings have fallen off abruptly.

Those two things mean much to morale. Unless the Germans can stop the supplies and force Washington to recall the warships the people of Britain can stand anything the Germans bring against them this winter: bombings, gas or invasion. The British cannot take the offensive in any immediate future without American manpower, in my opinion, but they cannot be beaten by Germany unless American aid is stopped.

Finally there is the promise of the future to be seen in England to-day. Your train comes into the gaunt ruins of what was once a railway station. People have laid out fish on newspapers or other wares on burnt timbers placed across piles of bricks. They are trying to carry on. Suddenly you hear the drone of motors, then the roar. Here they come—bombers—10, 30, 50 bombers. And above and beyond them is the whine of fighter aircraft, too high to be seen. The people's faces brighten. The Royal Air Force is on a daylight sweep across the Channel to Germany.

Twice when I watched this scene the people standing in the railway station raised a cheer, the kind of cheer that roared from the throats of peace-loving but hard-fighting English folks at Blenheim, Trafalgar or Waterloo.

Opinion Of Commodore

Canadians Have Nazi Pilots Beaten Before They Start

"The Canadians think for themselves." That was the opinion given in an interview at Toronto by Air Commodore A. C. Critchley, Canadian-born chief of the initial training wings in England. He arrived with a group of Royal Air Force officials, who will inspect various training schools of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan at the invitation of the R.C.A.F.

"I know my Canadians pretty well and I know where the Canadian fighters should be," Air Commodore Critchley said. "No Hun in the world can touch a well-equipped Canadian division on an even footing. The Canadian pilot has the Hun beat a mile before he starts."

Air Commodore Critchley, born in Calgary, said: "I believe the war will be over and the Hun defeated within four years. The longer America hangs back, the longer it's going to take, of course."

Must Surrender Blankets

Norwegian citizens and stores must surrender their wool blankets for use by the German army in accordance with a decree which ordered everyone possessing blankets to deliver them immediately. Failure to do so would be punishable by a prison sentence up to three years or by a heavy fine.

The man who knows nothing and wants to find out everything is almost as big a bore as the man who thinks he knows everything and insists upon telling it.

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. Strange

An International Wheat Conference now meeting hopes to divide up the World's wheat trade during this war and after the war, and to allocate certain quotas to export countries.

For my own part I do not believe that the best interests of Canadian wheat growers would be served by having their high quality wheat placed on an equal basis with the lower quality produced by other countries.

In any event, however, even if quotas are set, the quality in Canadian wheat in itself alone should warrant a much higher quota for this country than for others.

Certainly it seems then that from any point of view the high quality of Canadian wheat should not only be maintained by our farmers, but if possible improved.

Farmers, therefore, who are in doubt about the quality of their crops should find out the variety best suited for their district, and then should secure a few bushels of the very best Registered or Certified seed, and sow these carefully on a few of their cleanest acres of summerfallow. This will provide seed for a larger acreage the next year. If every farmer would do this simple and inexpensive thing the quality of Canadian wheat would soon go up with a bound.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Second official estimate of Canada's 1941 wheat crop is 302.6 million bushels, down 3.8 from September estimate and about half of 1940 crop (prairie provinces alone 282 million) -- Corn production in Indo-China in 1941 is considerably below normal -- Argentine wheat crop prospects are below normal owing to recurrent frosts and dry weather.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Latest official estimates place the Australian wheat crop at 166 million bushels compared with 152 million in 1940 -- U.S. corn production in 1941 has been officially estimated at 2,675 million, up 265 million from the 10 year average -- Political tension in the Orient continues to disturb prospects of Pacific coast exports.

Annual Meeting
Alberta Board of Trade

The annual general meeting of the Alberta Board of Trade and Agriculture was held in the Buffalo Hotel, Red Deer, on Monday, Nov. 27th.

That the convention has excited keen interest in business and agricultural circles throughout the province was evidenced by the fact that 20 Boards of Trade had delegates present.

Prominent on the agenda were resolutions dealing with the National Housing Act, legislation presently being advocated by the retail merchants Association, the War Effort, Discriminating features of the gas and electric sales tax, the Alberta coal industry, the Can-Am-Lethbridge highway, the minimum wheat price, war financing, and other timely topics.

The Alberta Board of Trade and Agriculture, being non-political, fills a unique roll in the affairs of the province in that it brings together annually business community leaders of all sections of the province and thus crystallizes and gives expression to public opinion as no other organization is equipped to do.

Erosion Again

Last summer, the writer encountered a district in southern Manitoba in which erosion, probably by both wind and water, had gone so far that the top-soil had been entirely lost from the uplands. The crops were stunted and unhealthy. A letter was addressed to Dr. J. L. Doughty, Soil Research Laboratory, Swift Current, suggesting that he visit the area and attempt to ascertain the loss in fertility suffered by the eroded areas.

Dr. Doughty surveyed the district and collected soil samples from the "white" eroded patches and from adjacent dark areas at a distance of not more than fifteen or twenty feet. The results of laboratory analyses showed that the samples from eroded areas had an average of 45 per cent less organic matter and 39 per cent less nitrogen than samples from apparently undamaged areas. Samples of the crops were also taken, and it was found that those growing on eroded soil contained 28 per cent less nitrogen than those on un-eroded soil and, of course, the yields would be substantially reduced.

Dr. R. D. Bird secured, in the same area, an excellent color photograph of a field of summerfallow which is practically ruined by erosion.

The results of Dr. Doughty's experiments, together with Dr. Bird's photograph, are reproduced in a circular just published by the Agricultural Department of the Line Elevators' Association. Copies may be secured through grain buyers of line elevator companies associated with this Department or from The North-West Line Elevators Association, Winnipeg or Calgary.

Establishment of a central nursing school to provide initial training in the profession was urged by the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses on the special University investigation committee sitting in the Legislative Buildings. Dr. Robert Newton, acting president of the University, agreed the matter was most important, and H. H. Parlee, K.C. committee chairman, believed the federal government might be interested enough to give financial aid.

The Alberta Teachers Association submitted a brief urging the establishment of a faculty of education at the University, the faculty to have complete control over the training of high school teachers. On the same theme, a submission by the Edmonton Social Credit constituency Association urged a four year course leading to a degree, with courses now offered by summer school taught by graduates providing credits. Dr. C. B. Willie was spokesman for this body.

LETTER MAY DECIDE FATE OF YOUR ROMANCE OR JOB

Her Note Needs A Few Tips

How quickly you can kill a summer romance with a boring letter! And yet good letters are as easy to write as bad ones.

Easier! For it's hard, dull work to grind out "Dear Bill, How are you? I am writing to say—" But it's a cinch to scrawl your gay, natural greeting, "Hi, Bill!"

And why waste words "writing to say?" Just SAY! At once Bill recognizes the real, the attractive you he knows. He loves your characteristic description of the jalopy that "wants to die but nobody'll let it," the "glorious purple sunset at Clear Lake."

It's the same in business letters. You don't hem and haw, "In reply to your letter—" You write directly: "The salary you mentioned will be satisfactory."

That positive note is important in closing, too. Not "Regretting the delay we are—" but "We will see that such a delay does not occur again. Sincerely yours..."

Our 32-page booklet tells how to make your letters vivid and correct. Has samples of 24 letters, formal, friendly, business. Helps improve your grammar, suggests topics to write about.

Needs Victory Badly

Hitler Knows It Is Necessary To Boost German Morale

Hitler needs a resounding victory for home consumption, Major-Gen. F. G. Beaumont-Nesbitt, attached to the British Purchasing Commission in Washington, said in an interview at the headquarters of the British Information Service, 30 Rockefeller Plaza.

"But he is not getting that victory," he added. "What he really needs is to give the German people a filip before another winter sets in."

The morale of the German people is a definite factor in this war. That morale is very brittle. Do not misunderstand me. I do not say that the morale is breaking. It is a long way from that. But it is more vulnerable now than ever before."

Asked about the possibility of a British expeditionary force to Russia, the General said: "There is a possibility. That is my personal opinion. But there is the question of maintenance. That question is more vital than the question of men only."—New York Sun.

Civilians As Mine Spotters

Fifty Volunteers Are Helping Naval Crews At Alexandria, Egypt

Fifty civilian volunteers, including two Americans, are helping naval crews keep dusk-to-dawn vigils nightly to protect the British Mediterranean fleet from airborne Axis mines.

They work from a half dozen or more small boats in Alexandria harbor under direction of Cmdr. Ralph Duckworth. They spot the positions at which German and Italian planes drop mines, then mark each position with a sinker and float.

Navy officers take over each morning and destroy the mines. They are exploded with gunfire.

Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, commander-in-chief at Alexandria, gave the job of organizing the civilian patrols to Col. Edward Peel, cotton exporter decorated during the First Great War.

Among the volunteers were Judge Jasper Brinton, 62, a member of the Alexandria mixed courts, and his son, John Brinton, 27, both of Philadelphia.

The navy supplies helmets, fuel and other essentials. The spotters provide their own food and clothing, most of them appearing in blue overalls or oil-stained shirts and trousers.

Mrs. Valerie Goodchild Kensington, secretary of the British Boat club, is secretary of the minespotter patrol. Each evening a dusk she goes to the harbor and issues sailing orders. Often she boards a boat to spend the night on the watch for mines.

No Doubt About It

Invisible Hairpins In Britain To-day Are Really Invisible

Hairpins! Who'd ever dreamt that there'd come a day when they were at a premium? But they are in Britain to-day. There are plenty of the thick, old-fashioned ones. But the invisible ones are, really, invisible.

Barbara Back, the fashion and beauty expert, told an amusing story in the BBC shortwave studio the other day. She'd gone in an air raid shelter a month or two before and was followed by two women with a backgammon board. As good a way as any of passing the time. They played all through the night with gamblers' fever. And the stakes weren't money, but hairpins. When the "All Clear" went, one of them had lost six packets. She was much more upset than if she'd overplunged her bank balance.—BBC London Letter.

Small In Comparison

Canada's cheese contract with Great Britain asks for the shipment during the current production year of 50,000 long tons. This looks like a lot until it is compared with the 160,000 long tons which New Zealand has agreed to ship.

Gives Jumper Confidence

Invention Of Anti-Spin Parachute Has Been Announced

A new parachute which will prevent parachute troops from spinning dizzily through the air was announced in a symposium on aviation medicine at the University of Chicago's 50th anniversary celebration.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy of Northwestern University, Chicago, and Dr. Anton J. Carlson of the University of Chicago, declared the new parachute with a small anti-spin "air anchor" has been found to give the jumper a feeling of confidence, particularly in delayed falls because he floats in an erect or partly-erect position and does not whirl.

Complete Literature

Given To World By Ancient Greece, Modern France And England

There are few nations who have during their whole existence really thought and read. Among the Ancients the Latin literature is worth nothing at the outset, then it borrowed and became imitative. Among the moderns, German literature does not exist for nearly two centuries (1550-1750). Italian literature and Spanish literature end at the middle of the seventeenth century. Only ancient Greece, Modern France and England offer a grand and complete literature.

A man who had been courting a girl for ten years was asked why he didn't marry her.

"Well, I've been seeing her on Wednesday and Friday evenings every week for ten years," he said, "and if I married her I wouldn't have anywhere to go on those evenings."

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

—BY—
Eleanor Atterbury Colton

CHAPTER XXXII.

Talbot arrived just before court convened.

"Devona, darling," he cried and held out his arms to her. "What in the devil has happened?"

"Oh—Tal! I'm so glad—you've come!"—and all the fine reserve she'd tried so valiantly to build up dissolved now at sight of Tal's anxious concern.

Between wrenching sobs, she told the whole wild story to the lapel of his tweed coat, felt his arms tighten around her comfortingly, understandingly.

"Gosh, honey, that was a big risk to take for Dale's sake. It was silly, sure. But not criminal. What's he thinking about that he's not tickled to death you wanted to help him so much? Great Scott! I'll tell that big boob—"

He kissed her quickly, pulled a big handkerchief from his pocket, dried her eyes. "Don't cry, sweetheart. I'll find Dale now and tell him—"

"Tell him what?" Dale appearing in the door now, demanded quietly.

"What I think of your upsetting Devona like this!" Tal raged furiously. "What's the big idea, any way. You know she's not guilty of anything. What do you want to drag her through all this—"

"I don't know anything of the kind," Dale said grimly. "I've only got the evidence. It's my duty to 'drag her into it' as you say."

"Dale, you're nuts."

"Maybe. But—we'll see what the Judge says. The case is about to be called now. Shall we go?"

Once proceedings began, Devona's confidence in the invulnerability of her innocence began to flag. Young Dwyer championed her earnestly, even brilliantly, but nothing could stop the snowballing chain of evidence. Nothing but her own clear conscience. Dwyer obviously wasn't too convinced of that innocence himself.

One by one, each of Macias' despicable gang identified her as one of their accomplices. Macias' orders, no doubt. Even the men she'd seen only across the club dining room, spoke familiarly of "Dona," shrugged, identified her easily.

Even the jealous Freda said, carelessly, "Sure. She's the dame he ditched me for. I'm seen her before plenty of times. Once she was leaving his apartment. About 3 in the morning."

"It wasn't that late!" Devona gasped aloud, unconsciously. Then realizing how she'd betrayed herself, flushed hotly.

Tal flinched and Dale's mouth curved downward. It was that that finally broke down her resolve to follow Dale's advice and "let your attorney do the talking." That and the snicker that flickered around the courtroom at her silly objection. Leaping to her feet, she faced the Judge.

"Please, your honor, may I explain?"

The old Judge suppressed a quiet smile. "Please do."

Afterward, Devona couldn't remember what she said, exactly. She could only recall that sea of hostile faces, the passionate fury of her own voice, the sudden calm confidence that she must make these people see and believe in her innocence. She'd done a foolish—but not a criminal thing. She had worked for Macias only because she had to be self-supporting and because he was the only person who had offered her a job. Mr. Dale Brasher himself had introduced her to Macias.

Devona remembered flinging him a challenging glance at that point. And remembered or thought she did, the little smile of encouragement with which he rewarded her.

It was over finally. She remembered stumbling blindly back to the armchair while the room suddenly began to spin around her. She didn't quite make it to the chair before the darkness overtook her. She felt Dale's arm go around her waist and from immense distance, heard him saying, through the roaring in her ears,

"She's fainted. Gangway, please." And then blissful oblivion.

When Devona opened her eyes, again, Dale hovered over her. In his office now, just the two of them. She lay on a hard bench, her own coat folded under her head, Dale's topcoat flung across her as a coverlet.

"Feeling better now?" He smiled and smoothed her forehead with a damp cloth.

"What—happened?"

"Charges against you dismissed for lack of evidence," he said and he smiled quietly. "The others come to trial in a few weeks."

"Oh—I'm so glad." She shut her eyes again, too exhausted to prop them open longer. Besides it was so pleasant knowing Dale was right there, that nothing threatened her now, that—

Dale looked at her for a long minute and Devona was suddenly aware that hostility was gone from those beloved blue eyes now, that bitterness no longer curled those lips. Something had happened. Something wonderful. Scarcely daring to breathe, she waited.

After a moment, Dale went on: "Almost six months ago, I met the girl I'd been looking for all my life. I didn't then have sense enough to realize it. But it wasn't long before I knew she was different."

He took her hand in his, pressed it hard. "Then, one morning, I discovered I loved her. I told her so and she said she loved me, too. I was the happiest guy in the world. The next day she walked out of my life with only a sarcastic note by way of explanation."

Devona sat erect now, her heart thudding at her throat. "Dale—I—"

He pressed a finger across her lips. "Let me finish. Nearly crazy, I went to her mother for more explanation. What I got wasn't what any man can stand hearing—that a girl loved him for his money, and for that alone. And when she found out there wasn't any money—she didn't want to see him again—ever!"

Her own words—distorted like that! "Oh, Dale! How could you believe that?"

"I don't—now. Not after that eloquent plea this morning. But—Devona—why did you leave that morning? What did you mean by that funny, cryptic note?"

Devona drew back, winced with the pain of remembering why! Slowly, she released her hand from his.

"Because I wanted—real love. Not the shoddy, second-hand thing you were—offering. To me, love means loyalty, sincerity—" She moistened dry lips. "I wanted—marriage. I thought that was what you wanted too, until Vara told me."

"Told you what, Devona?"

She met his eyes squarely. "That I was a fool. That you were not the marrying kind. That you had been her lover for years."

His face went white. "She said that. You're sure, Devona?"

"Of course, I'm sure." But suddenly she was just as sure it wasn't true.

"And you—believed it?"

The tears broke then and she buried her face against his shoulder. "I'm sorry, Dale. I should not have. I didn't know. I thought you—"

Dale held her close then, his lips just touching her temples, his voice pleading softly. "Don't, darling. Don't cry."

Suddenly Dale released her, rose quickly, paced the little room. "I see it all now. She needed what little cash I had pretty desperately.

She was afraid if I got interested in you, I'd lose interest in her show. That's plain enough. And she's always pretended our relationship was something more than purely business. I never thought much about it. She's an attractive woman. She's never pretended to confine her flitting to any one man."

Dale stamped across the room again, hands jammed deep into his pockets. Then he faced Devona again.

"That accounts for her story about your being in an expensive school up North pursuing a rich husband. Of course, I knew you weren't in school. But I did believe you wanted the rich husband."

"I only wanted—"

Then she stopped short. For a moment, they just stared at each other—and at the chasm that suddenly yawned between them. They still loved each other—exactly as before. That much hadn't changed unless to grow stronger, more compelling. But now—

Dale came to sit beside her again. "What are we going to do about this—now?" he asked quietly, his eyes searching hers, his face clouded with anxiety.

Devona went straight to the heart of it. "About—Tal, you mean?"

Dale nodded. At first, all kinds of wild schemes flooded into her mind—run away, elope, leave an explanatory letter, plan some way to make Tal hate her—

But, of course, they couldn't. Too much had happened now. They could never go back to the happiness of that afternoon eternities ago when heaven had seemed so nearly within reach.

"Nothing, Dale," she said quietly now. "Tal couldn't stand knowing that I—love him—only because of you. I've got to keep my promise to him. It's the only way—now."

Dale drew a long breath, crushed her hand in his until she nearly cried out.

"Yes. This all came—too late to do any good."

Their eyes met, then. And—slowly—their lips. A kiss that spoke of everything—the boundlessness of their love, its infinite existence—its hopelessness.

"That's just to—remember you by," she whispered as she pushed him away. "From now on—it's just friendship."

Dale nodded. "Fate's—crazy, isn't it?"

"A strange destiny," she murmured softly and tried to realize that she must kill the love that destiny had brought her—kill it that they all three, she and Dale and his brother, might survive.

Bravely she smiled into the stricken face of her future brother-in-law. "There is no other way, darling."

"No—no other way."

No One Seems To Know The Origin Of Toast

"The origins of toast are lost in the mists of antiquity. Some inspired philosopher ought to do for toast what Charles Lamb did for roast pig: Give us, that is, at least, a plausible theory of how it came to be," submits the New York Sun editorially, and goes on to say:

"Most probably the actual inventor will never be known, and it is better so, for monuments would be erected to him at every cross-roads, adding intolerably to our traffic problems. Toast is the sine qua non of every Canadian breakfast—not even coffee would be less readily dispensed with. Every materfamilias knows that the quickest way to get the menfolk out of bed in the morning is not to jangle a bell, but to open the kitchen door a chink and let the fumes of toast like incense pervade the house.

"An expert on culinary matters distinguishes three kinds of toast: The soft and golden, which requires very fresh bread and must be toasted quickly; the crisp and brown, which is the same but treated on a slow fire, and the dry and crunchy, which is made with stale bread and cooked by very slow heat. Which to prefer is a matter of taste—and of teeth. Other kinds of toast might be added, such as the paper-thin sort, which is credited to Dame Nellie Melba; milk toast, so appreciated in nurseries of an elder day, and the special toast preferred by gourmets, of which the distinguishing feature is that it is surmounted judiciously by a plump-breasted quail.

"Only one kind of toast is shunned by men of discernment. It is the kind that begins 'Mr. Chairman' and only after 40 minutes of platitudes ends with 'Gentlemen, I give you—'. It is a pity that this sort of thing was ever permitted to disgrace the name of toast."

ENDURING TREASURES

How much better is it to get wisdom than gold! and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver!—Proverbs 16:16.

By wisdom wealth is won; But riches purchased wisdom yet for none.—Bayard Taylor.

Self-forgetfulness, purity, and love are treasures untold—constant prayers, prophecies, and anointings.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Therefore, come what may, hold fast to love. Though men should rend your heart, let them not embitter or harden it.—F. W. Robertson.

There never did, and never will exist anything permanently noble and excellent in the character which is a stranger to the exercise of resolute self-denial.—Walter Scott.

What then remains? Courage, and patience, and simplicity, and kindness, and, last of all, ideas remain; these are the things to lay hold of and live with.—A. C. Benson.

Boy Of Nineteen Is Laying Bricks For Liverpool Cathedral

One of the greatest Cathedrals of modern times is being erected—for the present, at least—by one boy! Arthur Ronald Brady, 19, is the only bricklayer now working on the gigantic metropolitan cathedral, a large part of which has been built although there is still much left to be done.

Ronald's only companion is an ancient Irishman, Paddy Riley, who mixes and carries mortar.

Ronald is proud of his responsibility.

He says he guesses his bricklaying job would last several years at the present rate, but he doesn't know when the war may call him away.

The cathedral was designed by Sir Giles Gilbert Scott to be the largest in the country. The foundation stone was laid by Edward VII. in 1904.

It has suffered no great bomb damage, but blasts knocked out some of its beautifully executed stained glass. Bomb fragments have scarred its walls in places but haven't impaired its beauty.

RIGHT FOOD FOR REDUCING SHOWN BY CALORY CHART

High-Calory Foods Make Bulges

Wouldn't it be wonderful if high-calory foods were all labelled "Danger"? You'd never get fat!

But a calory chart shows your food friends and enemies just as clearly. Knowing them you lose quickly—two pounds a week!

And you lose comfortably without starving yourself. A low-calory tomato sandwich (175) is as satisfying as a cheese-nut sandwich (325 calories). A baked white potato (100) is as filling as a candied sweet (250).

You can even indulge in desserts—but keep an eye on the chart or you may be fooled! For instance, stewed apricots have 400 calories a cup.

But a cup of Spanish Cream dessert, although it looks wickedly gooey, turns out to be both "safe" (100 calories) and nourishing! Safe, too, is applesauce cake, 100 a slice, but Brown Betty has 250 calories a half cup.

Be willowy slim again on complete, delicious meals! Our 32-page booklet has 42 reducing menus—based on healthful protective foods and easily adapted to family use. Gives a calory chart, recipes for low-calory desserts.
